(taken from "History Of Fresno County) Abner was a farmer and merchant at Schoolcraft, MI. who engaged in the hardware and implement trade, and was also a stockman and drover. Moved to CA circa 1889 settling for a couple of years in San Francisco and two years later he removed to Fresno County where he bought a ranch on White's Bridge road, near Johnson. He made numerous improvements, laid out forty acres as a vineyard, and resided there until 1901. Then he sold out and removed to Ignatia Valley, Contra Costa County, where he set out one of the first and finest walnut orchards in the state. Now he resides in Oakland, still actively looking after his orchard, and each year celebrating, as a hale and hearty man of seventy-six, his far-away birthday--February 7, 1842. Mrs. Munger died in 1877.

Duane Munger

(taken from "History of Fresno County" Note: all facts need to be checked for accuracy.) An enterprising viticulturist, famed both for his own success and for his activity in promoting movements for the building up of the County, Warren Sanford Munger. Few if any so well deserve a large circle of friends, Mr. Munger's agreeable personality drawing many to him. He is the grandson of Luke Munger, who was born near Canton, OH, settled in Michigan as a farmer and died there. His father was Abner Munger. Warren was educated in the common and high school of his neighborhood. Warren became a graduate of the Morgan Park College of Chicago, after which he entered the employ of the Grand Trunk Railroad, and for six years was assistant train dispatcher at Schoolcraft. In 1891 he obtained a furlough and came to Fresno County for the summer; and although he subsequently returned to Schoolcraft and continued with the Grand Trunk until 1896, what he had seen of the wonderful opportunities afforded by Central CA was a revelation he never forgot.

Having permanently resigned from the railway service, Mr. Munger made haste to remove to California and bought forty acres of his present place, effecting the transaction with his brother Al as a partner. A year later he bought his brother out, and then he continued to make extensive improvements on the place. He built a handsome residence and good outbuildings, and since then has bought twenty acres adjoining. Now his sixty acres, at the corner of Belmont and Johnson Ave. constitute one of the choice ranches, of its size, in the county. Mr. Munger also owns forty acres on Belmont Ave., two and a half miles to the west. This property he has improved, fenced and cross-fenced, and sown to alfalfa and grain; and he has installed a fine pumping-plant -- one of the first in that section. He was one of the builders and is now the owner of the Forsey warehouse at Forsey station. The main Munger ranch is about four miles west of Fresno, and there the sixty acres is devoted to vineyards, with a pretty and profitable border of figs. Muscat and Thompson seedless grapes flourish under the direction of the experienced viticulturist. From the time when the first efforts were made to form a raisin association here Mr. Munger supported the movement: and he is today active in the California Associated Raisin Company.

A Republican in national politics, Mr. Munger served for many years as a member of state and county committees. He has also done good civic duty as a school trustee of the McKinley school district, where he has been clerk of the board, and as a member of grand juries, sometimes acting as chairman. In business circles Mr. Munger is quite as favorably known as a man of affairs, being interested in particular in the Pacific National Fire Insurance Company, of which he has been for some time a director.
